Message from Dr. Karen Whitney, President

Dear Colleagues and Students:

It is the mission of Clarion University to provide “transformative, lifelong learning opportunities through innovative, nationally recognized programs delivered in inclusive, student-centered environments.” To that end, Clarion University seeks to create a culture of inclusion where differences of perspectives, cultures and gender identities are respected and valued.

I am especially pleased to share this plan, A Strategic Plan for Equity and Diversity 2013-2018, which is central to advancing the University’s mission, vision and core values. As such, this plan recognizes that our differing viewpoints, cultures, backgrounds and gender identities make for an intellectually robust and inclusive university in which to work, learn and succeed.

The plan and its goals are intended to transcend considerations of structural (numerical) diversity, and strategically engage us in a thoughtful, reflective and transformative process for acquiring the inclusive excellence that we seek. Moreover, each of us has a role in creating this culture of inclusion, and we must intentionally commit ourselves to the advancement of the goals, objectives and strategies that are offered by this plan.

I thank you for your commitment to and the time that you will devote to the University’s promotion of diversity and inclusive excellence.

Sincerely,

Karen M. Whitney

II. Executive Summary

Demographic projections coupled with scholarly research of the 21st century continue to make a compelling case for the reasons why diversity and excellence must be mutually inclusive core values of a university's mission. Consistent with the mission, vision and core values of Clarion University and informed by the publication of *AASCU/NASULG: Now is the Time: Meeting the Challenge for a Diverse Academy*¹, this plan serves as a thoughtful planning approach to strategically advance, integrate and assess diversity, equity and inclusive excellence in all aspects of the University's mission and ethos.

The Foreword and the Executive Summary introduce the plan. The subject areas comprise: Clarion University Mission, Vision and Core Values; Clarion University's Statement on Diversity and Equity; Diversity as a Compelling Interest: The Rationale; The Diversity Challenge: Local and National Context; The Clarion University Profile: A Structural Snapshot; Baseline Assessment and Goals; and The Centers of Responsibility: A Reflective Analysis.

The subject area of "Diversity as a Compelling Interest" articulates the economic and democratic imperatives for the advancement of diversity, offers a definition of diversity, and advances an argument in support of diversity and inclusion as core values of the University's mission. The following section on the "Diversity Challenge: Local and National Context" calls attention to fundamental questions and considerations that must receive institutional priority given the geographical challenges that are endemic to most rural institutions such as Clarion in their efforts to recruit and retain diverse underrepresented and underserved populations.

"Clarion University's Profile: A structural Snapshot" delineates a quantitative snapshot of the University's representation of students and employees by gender and ethnicity. Tables 1 - 5, 7 - 9 and 11 - 13 are specific to the student representation (access and success) while Tables 6 and 10 are specific to the employee representation. Tables 8-13 present a comparison between Clarion and PA State System of Higher Education (PASSHE).

The Baseline Assessment sets forth an informal and a formal evaluative process for the campus-wide assessment of diversity and inclusive excellence especially as reflected via the six strategic goals that are articulated as part of the plan. The six goals consisting of: Institutional Climate and Inter-and Intra-Group Relations; Recruitment and Retention of a Diverse Student Body; Recruitment and Retention of a Diverse Workforce; Research and Scholarship; Curriculum and Pedagogy; and Diversity of University Leadership are intended to inform the strategic action plans that must be addressed by each college, division, unit and department in order to enhance and maximize diversity, equity and inclusion in the critical areas of campus climate, recruitment and retention, research and scholarship, curriculum and pedagogy; and leadership.

The Appendix of the plan, The Centers of Responsibility: A Reflective Analysis, which is modeled after Now is the Time: Meeting the Challenge for a Diverse Academy, utilizes reflective questions as a tool to achieve the intended outcomes of the plan.

The plan includes a framework to monitor both quantitatively and qualitatively the University's progress over the next five years. In agreement with each goal and/or strategy, each division, college, unit or department is expected to establish its action items with measurable outcomes integrated into the unit's own strategic plan.

Clarion University: Statement on Diversity and Equity

In keeping with its mission and core values, Clarion University reaffirms its commitment to diversity and equity as integral parts of educational excellence and civic engagement.

Clarion University and its members embrace their responsibility to cultivate and sustain an academic community that is characterized by a mutual understanding of a shared sense of purpose, commitment to core values, and respect for a diversity of cultures, perspectives, backgrounds and experiences.

Clarion University and its members are expected to advance equitable practices and policies that support the full inclusion of all its constituents and, above all, preserve the dignity of all of its members.

Clarion University and its members recognize that the university's pursuit of excellence is predicated upon its obligation to ensure that these shared values and equitable practices are sustained through all of its available resources. These resources include but are not limited to curricular and co-curricular programs and business practices.

IV. Diversity as a Compelling Interest: The Rationale

Clarion University of Pennsylvania strives to accomplish its mission and core values related to diversity and equity while maintaining academic excellence and promoting civic engagement. As prominently noted by Sandra Day O'Connor, "This Court has long recognized that education is the very foundation of good citizenship, and for this reason, the diffusion of knowledge and opportunity through public higher education must be accessible to all individuals....It is essential if the dream of one nation is to be realized." (qtd. in Sandra Day O'Connor)²

Clarion University of Pennsylvania recognizes and supports the compelling need to expand the focus and framework in creating a definition of diversity that is central to its mission. As evidenced by the various identity and affinity groups on campus, a paradigm shift is necessary in order to be more current, global, and inclusive. At Clarion University, diversity is fundamental to the creation of a campus culture of inclusion. As such, this plan broadly defines diversity as differences among individuals and groups along dimensions of inter-generational, ethnicity, race, gender, religion, sexual orientation, gender identity, veteran, and socio economic status. The expansion of a more global view of diversity will enhance and further the Clarion University mission to achieve academic and inclusive excellence.

Academic and Inclusive Excellence

"Experience in diverse and international environments is an indispensable aspect of quality education for today's global society."³ By fostering a more diverse campus, students, faculty and staff will benefit by encountering a broader perspective of society. This promotes an environment for new directions in scholarship and research as well as interactions with individuals whose core values may differ from one's own. A diverse and inclusive campus fosters more complex thinking, as the entire university community engages in the demands and realities of the global society.

Economic Imperative

As the demographics of higher education continue to expand, so too does the workplace environment. As the numbers of employment opportunities continue to grow, higher education must provide the academic excellence to this diverse student population to assure educational, employment and economic success. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, 14 million jobs are projected from 2004-2014 that will be filled by people that have earned bachelor's or higher degrees and who will be entering the job force for the first time.⁴ It is imperative that institutions of higher education recognize the challenge of preparing young adults for a variety of employment opportunities.

In facing the global market, diversity within the workforce is an integral component as it demands individuals with cross-cultural backgrounds and experiences. The U.S. Department of Labor estimates that by 2020, the projected population of the workforce will vary by race in comparison to 2010 to include: 79% being white as compared to 81% in 2010; black workers will remain at 12%; Asian workers will increase from 5% to 6%; and all others will increase from 2 to 3%. In addition, by 2020, 68% of all men are expected to be in the workforce, while 57% of women, which is at a higher growth projection than males. The Asian working population is currently growing at the fastest rate of any other race, with a growth of 2.7% projected for 2020. The Hispanic labor force is growing faster than any other ethnic groups at an increased rate of 3% to a total estimate of 19% for 2020.⁵ These calculations impress upon institutions of higher education the crucial role of diversity. The growing number of individuals from various backgrounds, ethnic and racial groups must have successful educational experiences and the access to the benefits of higher education to be competitors in the market for future job opportunities.

Democratic Imperative

In order to protect and maintain our democratic system of government, the education of fervent citizens is a necessity. The national defense of our country depends on having a core of diverse and well-educated military officers, as well as civilians. Research has shown that there is a definite relationship between diversity, civic engagement, and cognitive development.⁶ According to Hurtado, at institutions where diversity is part of the mission, students are more culturally aware, more interested in the social issues and political process, and more likely to vote. At campuses that have a diversity requirement students are better prepared to live in a diverse democracy.

Challenges

While it is recognized that creating a diverse population that is similar to the national trends is difficult in a rural setting such as Clarion, Pennsylvania, the University strives to meet this challenge. With a student population of over 6,500, Clarion proudly acknowledges that students come from over 45 states and 31 countries to make up its demographic diversity. Although the Clarion University data on student diversity models that of the national trends with regards to the working population from 2010, as previously noted, the areas that are most lacking fall within the Asian population and Black, Non-Hispanic. Clarion recognizes that these equity gaps are institutional priorities as demonstrated by the University's current recruitment and retention efforts.

In addition to the challenges from the student profile perspective, Clarion University recognizes that with a diverse student population, the individual needs and abilities of students will vary dramatically. Therefore, another challenge is to seize this opportunity to address student needs by providing effective programs and services to successfully support diversity among student learners. In reaching the more diverse populations of first-generation, low-income, adult learners, students with disabilities, international students, minority students, and those less prepared, etc., Clarion seeks to contribute to their academic success, graduation and ultimately their transition to successful careers within the global society. Initiatives among support services, programming for underrepresented populations, financial aid training, and commitments to retention and graduation rates are targeted areas for improvement in order to achieve success in meeting the needs of diverse learners.

In summary, the creation of a more diverse population among the campus community is imperative for college students in today's society. This will not only benefit students personally within the campus community, but it will also impact the quality in which higher education institutions are preparing these students to become leaders within the global society. A compelling need for diversity among campuses has critical implications for the direct educational impact, economic success and ultimately the vitality of this nation's democracy.

V. The Diversity Challenge: Local and National Context

As an institution of higher education, Clarion understands that achieving and maintaining a diverse campus population is not only ethical but also necessary for our mission to prepare students to participate in a multicultural and global society. Clarion recognizes that the world is more connected across cultural, ethnic, racial and religious planes than ever before, and there is every reason to believe that this interconnectedness and interdependency will continue to grow and strengthen. Clarion's success depends on the ability of its constituencies, both as individuals and as a community, to interface with diverse constituencies in a manner that affirms the inherent dignity of all regardless of individual differences.

From a local perspective, there are two areas that are believed to be critical to the discussion of diversity at Clarion University: the recruitment and retention of underrepresented students, faculty, and staff; and the cultivation of healthy and just relationships across a diverse spectrum. The reflective questions on recruitment and retention of underrepresented groups, and campus climate (Appendix) are intended to guide and inform the action items taken by each unit or department in addressing these two critical areas.

VI. Clarion University's Profile: A Structural Snapshot

Diversity Snapshot of the University with Current Data

As of Fall 2012, there are 2,285 male students and 4,235 female students enrolled at the University. The ethnic composition for the entire student body, a total of 6,520 students, as shown in Table 1 below:

Beginning Fall 2011, the PASSHE State System no longer collects Student Population by Ethnicity data on international students.

Tables showing the ethnic distribution according to gender are available and generally reflect the same trend as the university data in Tables 2. Some differences, though, are noted between the percentage of male Black, Non-Hispanic students in the total student population (7.4%) and female, Black, Non-Hispanic students (4.5%) and between the percentages of male, White, Non-Hispanic students (85.0%) and female, White, Non-Hispanic students (86.2%) (University Fact Book, Gender and Race of All Students, 2012-2013).

As with the total university population, tables showing the ethnic distribution according to gender are available and generally reflect the same trend as the total population data. Some differences, though, are noted again between the same groups mentioned previously. The percentage of male, Black-Non-Hispanic undergrads (7.9%) and female, Black, Non-Hispanic undergrads (5.0%) shows a greater difference than other ethnic groups. Likewise, the percentage of male, White, Non-Hispanic undergrads (85.6%) and the female, White, Non-Hispanic undergrads (88.2%) shows a greater difference than other ethnic groups. Ethnic distribution according to gender for the graduate population closely resembles the ethnic composition for the entire graduate population. The greater difference is found between the genders since approximately 80% of the graduate student composition is female with 20% being male (University Fact Book, Gender and Race of All Students, 2012-2013).

FTIC Retention and Graduation Rates

Current data for first time, baccalaureate degree-seeking freshman shows retention information at various stages. For example, the most recent data for first-time, full-time, baccalaureate-seeking freshman who continued to the fourth year of study (in 2008) demonstrates much lower figures for non-white students than for white students (see Table 3). Cumulative graduation rates in 4 years or less time for 2007 show additional patterns of disparity (see Table 4). (University Fact Book, First-time, Full-time, Baccalaureate Degree-seeking Freshman, 2012-2013).

Majors

Data demonstrates that White, Non-Hispanic students are generally distributed throughout the various majors offered at Clarion. Black, Non-Hispanic students show the next largest distribution of majors. Degree programs having five or more students are: Biology, Liberal Studies, Mass Media Arts & Journalism, Psychology, Sociology, Accounting, Finance, International Business, Management, Marketing, Early Childhood, Early Childhood/Sped, Master of Science in Library Science (MSLS), Rehabilitative Sciences, Nursing, Medical Imaging, Liberal Studies, Student Affairs, and Undecided. Associate degree programs having 5 or more Black, Non-Hispanic students are: ASAA and Allied Health. Other ethnic groups do not show 5 or more students in any major except for the Master of Science in Library Science (MSLS) program. In addition to Black, Non-Hispanic students, five or more Hispanic and Asian/Pacific Islander students are enrolled in the MSLS program (University Fact Book, Majors by Race and Gender, 2011-2012).

Ethnic composition is available for the following job classifications: instructional faculty, non-instructional faculty, executive/managerial/administrative, other professional, secretarial/clerical, technical/paraprofessional, service/maintenance, and crafts (University Fact Book, Employees by Job Classification, Race and Gender, 2011-2012). Data for instructional faculty by department and gender indicates that genders are almost equivalent at the associate professor rank (University Fact Book, Instructional Faculty Headcount and FTE by College, 2011-2012).

Diversity Snapshot of Clarion University in the PASSHE Context

The State System Fact Book for 2009-10 first-time freshman data by ethnicity demonstrates African Americans to be the largest ethnic minority at Clarion (see Table 6) (State System Fact Book, 2009-10, Table A.8 Applications, Acceptances, and Enrollments, by University and Race, Fall 2009).

Table 6: Clarion University First-Time Freshman Admissions Information by Ethnicity (Fall 2009)

Applicants	African Americans	Native Americans	Asians	Latino
Applications	612	14	64	78
Acceptances	278	12	42	47
Enrollments	119	5	14	12
% Accepted	45.4%	86%	66%	60.2%
% Enrolled	19.4%	35.7%	21.9%	15.4%

Analysis of PASSHE-wide application and acceptance rates reveals differences for various ethnic groups (see Table 7). Compared to PASSHE system-wide figures, Clarion accepted Native American minority students in much higher percentages relative to application numbers than in the PASSHE system as a whole, while rates of acceptance for African Americans, Asians, and Latinos were generally in line with PASSHE figures (State System Fact Book, 2009-10, Table A.8 Applications, Acceptances, and Enrollments, by University and Race, Fall 2009).

Table 7: Comparison of Clarion University to PASSHE System Acceptance Rates by Ethnicity (Fall 2009)

Applicants	Percent of Applicants Accepted (Fall 2009)
	Clarion	PASSHE
African Americans	45.4	41.8
Native Americans	85.7	56.5
Asians	65.6	63.7
Latino	60.3	57.9

The percentage of accepted students who subsequently enrolled was higher than PASSHE-wide rates, with the exception of Latinos (see Table 8). African Americans enrolled in substantially higher rates compared to the system-wide data.

Table 8: Comparison of Clarion University to PASSHE Enrollment Rates by Ethnicity (Fall 2009)

Applicants	Percent of Accepted that Enrolled (Fall 2009)
	Clarion	PASSHE
African Americans	42.8	28.9
Native Americans	41.7	37.4
Asians	33.3	25.6
Latino	25.5	31.6

Distinctions among first-time freshman applications, acceptances, and enrollments can also be viewed by PA resident/non-resident breakdowns. The vast majority of applications in all categories derive from the state of Pennsylvania. Percentages of acceptance and enrollments for African Americans and Native Americans follow generally in line with the patterns demonstrated for the total entering freshman class. Asian percentages (77.3% accepted, 38.2% enrolled) and Latino percentages (66.7% accepted, 34.4% enrolled) show a higher rate of acceptance and enrollment than non-resident figures (State System Fact Book 2009-10).

Employee Ethnicity Compared

The largest ethnic minority reported in employment figures for 2009 and 2010 is African American and Asian, respectively (See Table 9). In the reported faculty numbers, Clarion employed the third lowest number of African Americans and Asians in the State System for both time periods. Lock Haven, Mansfield and Cheyney also ranked lower than Clarion in terms of overall faculty numbers. These figures fall generally in line with Clarion’s overall faculty size, which is the fourth lowest. The only campuses with a smaller faculty than Clarion’s that enrolled a higher number of African American and Asian faculty, respectively, were Cheyney and Lock Haven.

Figures are also available for Hispanic, American Indian or Alaskan Native, Native Hawaiian or Pacific Islander, Asians, Whites, Non-Resident Aliens, and Multi-Racial and Unknown. Eight job classifications are available.

Degrees Awarded

The PA Department of Education website provides insight into degrees awarded among diverse populations. Of special note is Clarion’s relatively high number of associate degrees in the system (see Table 10). While male/female rates were more evenly balanced in 2009-10 than those of the system, the number of any ethnic group other than white (non-Hispanic) was low in both Clarion and system numbers (PA Department of Education, Completions awarded by category, level of program, gender and race, 2009-10, http://www.education.state.pa.us/portal/server.pt/community/higher_education/8684.)

VII. Baseline Assessment

Part One: Informal Self-Assessment

- Ask each constituency to conduct a self-assessment through discussion(s) of reflective questions during the next full semester after finalization and distribution of the Diversity/Equity strategic plan. (see attached for reflective questions)
- By the end of that semester, each group will be asked to submit a one page summary of their self-assessment to Social Equity office.
- As part of these discussions, we will provide brief directions to the groups. They will be asked to consider the following to frame their discussions:
 - To conduct a process that is inclusive and representative of all voices within their area
 - To consider issues of diversity/equity of both visible and invisible underrepresented groups

Part Two: Equity Scorecard Process

- Clarion is participating in PASSHE's system-wide initiative. The team was formed and trained in spring 2012. This is a two year process, which should conclude by December 2013.
